EXACT EDITIONS

The Premium Magazine Platform for Publishers, Libraries and Readers

Missions:

- To digitally preserve magazine archives.
- To sell digital subscriptions internationally to individuals and institutions.
- To provide digital publishing solutions for publishers.

History

Exact Editions is the premium magazine platform for readers, libraries, and publishers. Founded in 2005 and based in London, the company specialises in creating and selling fully searchable access to archival and ongoing digital editions, across web, iOS and Android platforms. Publisher clients include The Times Literary Supplement, DAZED, and The Spectator.

Exact Editions has always operated on the principle that publications with archives are valuable and readers should, where possible, have full access to the riches that they contain. The platform is equally able to deliver subscriptions to individuals and institutions, digitise archives and provide digital publishing solutions.

Founders

Daryl Rayner

Daryl Rayner started her career in STM publishing, working for Nature Publishing Group, Current Science Group and Elsevier before co-founding Exact Editions in 2005. She is now the Managing Director and lives in London.

Adam Hodgkin

Adam Hodgkin began his career as a philosophy editor with Oxford University Press; since then, he has co-founded and worked for three companies: Cherwell Scientific Publishing, xrefer, and Exact Editions. He is still active in publishing as the Chairman of Exact Editions.
